Bank of America Palm Beach Teens Student Leaders® program provides youth with paid internships at local nonprofits in recognition of their community efforts.

The Bank of America Charitable Foundation announced today that five high school juniors and seniors from Palm Beach County have been awarded eight-week paid summer internships Communities in Schools through the Bank of America Student Leaders program.

Following are the five participating students from Palm Beach who are currently interning at the Communities in Schools of Palm Beach County:

- Jasmine Johnson, from West Palm Beach and a recent graduate of Riviera Beach Preparatory and Achievement Academy.
- Madelyn Winchester, from West Palm Beach and a senior at Alexander W. Dreyfoos School of the Arts .
- Nya Jones, from Wellington and a senior at Palm Beach Central High School.
- Tova Jones, from Wellington and a recent graduate of Oxbridge Academy of the Palm Beaches.
- Deepti Sailappan, from Boca Raton and a senior at Pine Crest School.

Last week these five young individuals joined more than 200 other Bank of America Student Leaders from around the country for a week-long leadership summit in Washington, D.C., where they participated in skill-building workshops, a service learning project, sessions to develop better money habits and meetings with Members of Congress.

Since 2004, Bank of America's Corporate Social Responsibility programs and Communities In Schools of Palm Beach County, as Host Agency, have connected 55 teens from Palm Beach County with summer employment, and has supported 2,200 young people nationwide.
